SUNDAY MORNING. JUNE 23, 1861.

The Artillery Service. The heaviest work of war has long been performed by artillery. It performs what no other branch of the service can perform. From the campaigns of Charles VIII. of France, who first organized a rude but distinct system of field artillery, in his Italian war, down to the present, that arm of the military has been gradually growing in importance and efficlency. The improvements of late years in both light and heavy ordnance and in field batteries have given it a prominence hitherto unknown. It is destined to play a most conspicuous part in the pending war between the North and the South, and we think it will be proved before the war is ended that each good field battery well served will be worth have already had, it has made its mark as a most effective and powerful means of both offence and defence. The sooner we accept this fact the better. We are in a situation to avail ourselves of its advantages to the greatest extent, and should do so by all means. Our enemies are now bringing more cannon into the field than ever before. By their use they can reach and break our columns at long ranges with great effect, before our infantry can play upon them with the most improved small arms. Minnie balls, sabres and bayonets are thus to be put at defiance, till the conflict becomes hand to hand or next to that. We cannot afford to allow our adversaries such important advantages, and we cannot neglect them on our own part with prudence or with safety. We should take care to meet them on equal terms in this respect; and if we have not field artillery enough at present, we should lose no time in but just before the company started the providing it. We have in our possession the citizens gave them a barbeque, and of course materials and facilities for making field pieces sion. Our would be hero, not liking the in any number and of the best quality. We noise, made it convenient to eat a little too saw a few days ago in this city a rifled four much beef, took sick, went home and stayed ponader, which, we were informed, carried with great accuracy and power a distance of three miles. This one fact is enough to con- his house last fall than he does about the wince us of the value and practicability of government; at least no one knew of his havthat character of gun. It was wrought and one of the lightest and most manageable guns of the kind we ever saw.

We trust the powers that be will give their attention to the subject, and make provision, if not already provided, for this branch of our military service. We have in our own State the best iron that is to be found on the continent for the purpose, and science and skill to work it. Let every Tennessee Regiment be provided with a few pieces.

The Militia of Tennessee.

We call attention this morning to the General Orders, No. 1, from the office of the Adjutant General. It is of the utmost importance that the militis of Tennessee should, with as little delay as possible, be efficiently organized and drilled, and that the Governor should be furnished with correct information as to its entire strength, and the character of

The recommendation that all the rifles in the possession of citizens be prepared for the use of the Minnie ball is a good one, and if generally acted on will ensure a sufficient number of the most effective arms for the defence of the State. We trust that it will be responded to by every owner of a rifle in and hence are without details of the proceedings of the Greeneville Convention. These advices may or may not be true. Until we know the exact state of the case, we regard it press of Saturday says : as most politic to refrain from comment.

of a few of them will explain to the honest citizens of other parts of the State how such a thing was gotten up in our county. On account of the feelings of the relations of a few a thousand men. In all the skirmishes we of the men connected, we will not now give their names in connection with their history. But the guilty ones will know well to whom the facts apply. The man who we are in oreigner by birth, who, a few years ago, by taking the necessary steps, became a citibeen heard to say, it he had his five dollars back which it cost him, he would rather have it than to be a citizen and be allowed to vote in such a country as this. The gentleman who, we are informed, made the first speech, was formerly from Sevier county, East Tenessee, and left that county a few years ago on account of some of the citizens making bim hug a tree when he did not want to, and female portion of the community. He mardaughter and a step-daughter. He lived with them all three alike until the rather Cin. Another member of the meeting was a brave volunteer from Overton county in the Mexican war; there. Another one of the gentlemen is supposed to know more about what become of the big white sow whose ears were found near ing a single hog last fall, and last spring he sold two thousand pounds of bacon or more and he did not buy it either. Another one of the delegation has been sentenced to the pen itentiary; another tried for murder; another while acting as Justice of the Peace, tried to have his own mother made a county charge. In fact there is pretty much such a history at tached to the names of nearly all engaged in As their doors were locked and the pas word demanded as each one entered, it was impossible to know exactly what they done; but we suppose they passed some such resolutions as the following:

let Resolved That we will resist the execution of the laws of the State of Tennessee which, if carried into effect, would send a majority of our number to the penitentiary 2nd Resolved. That taking the advantage of our insolvent condition we are unwilling to pay our taxes; and there is no power on earth can compell us to, unless they can find something to levy upon.

We suppose that the above, in substance were the resolutions passed, as they relused to tell any one what they had done. We think it would be better to look after these men, as we understand they are secretly making up companies they call hom-guards; but it is generally believed that they intend looking more after other people's property and homes than their own. It is, however, due to a majority of our citizens to say that they condemn the whol proceeding as calculated to bring about a civil war in our midst. Although they voted against separation in the late election, ye they love Tennessee more than any other country on earth, and believe that the voice of a majority of her citizens should be the voice of Tennessee.

Departure of Wilson's Zouaves.

It appears that Billy Wilson's Zouaves die not get off from New York until Saturday afternoon. On Thursday last, when they were marched down to the wharf to embark on the Vanderbilt, nearly the whole body openly refused to go until they had a day's liberty. This was granted, and on Friday a large number of them were roaming through the city in a state of intoxication. The Er-

About 150 were thus brought to the pier, some on trucks, some between two or three officers, but nearly all of them in a state of beastly intoxication, and full of fight with everything and everybody. At half past 11 o'clock the ship weighed anchor, and with what soldiers she had on board proceeded dewn the bay to a point about midway between Staten Island and Long Island Here Lt Col. Creighton (Col. Wilson being confined to his berth from an arcident received from a fall) will await the arrival of the absentees, which will probably take three or four days, many of them being determined to make the most of their present spree. After the steamer had left her anchorage, one fellow iaboring under delirium tremens deliberately stripped himself and jumped off the pier, but was fortunately rescued by a small boat. He had scarcely put his foot on the pier again, when he tried a repetition of his daring experiment, but still without success. He was finally secured by four men of the regiment less drunk than himself and taken on a cart to the Staten Island Ferry.

Just as the boat was leaving the men be gan to fight, one had a piece of his ear bitten off. One of the women received a blow with a stick wich felled her to the ground. At 4 o'clock the Vanderbilt was seen passing the Narrows. It is not certain that she i bound to Fortress Monroe.

The Real Policy of the British Government Toward the United States -Geo, M. Dallas.

No one now in the United States can be supposed to be as well informed as to the intentions and policy of the British Govern-ment toward the United States in the present crisis as Geo. M Dallas, late American Minister to the Court of St. James, who has just returned to this country, and who is fresh from communication, by virtue of his position, with the leading statesmen of that nation. What he says of matters is thus stated

He is disposed to believe that the great arbiter is Cotton—that as the stock on hand will keep the English mills employed until November, the Ministry will not openly countenance the rebellion until it is ascertained whether the new crop is to be exported or not. If we crush the rebels and permit the new crop to be exported, all will be satisfactory to John Bull; if we fail to do so, and John Bull has to do without cotton, then some occasion will be found to get up a difficulty and force the blockade. If the war here continues until November, Ball will keep from which we extract as follows: He says there were about 10,000 men at Pensacola. On the 28th of May, 500 left for Virginia, but their place was supplied by tresh recruits, from Louisiana, be thinks There was no talk among the troops that any considerable number of them were to be marched to Virginia. The troops were generally in good health. Discipline was strictly maintained; but he says that notwithstanding thiss Gen. Bragg is not unpopular among the miles above Pensacola, ever since the blockade begun; and that they are conveyed thence by wagons to Pensacola. He saw a clature among these companies. The headtrain of near one hundred and fifty wagons dress is generally, however, a smart cap like thus supplied. They talk of connecting the two points by railroad.

At Pensacola everything was considered in readines for an attack, a fact the discharge of the machinists corroborates. All the build- low facings, roan, brown, burnt sienna and ings at the navy yard had been removed and olive-jackets, frocks, tunics, blouses, cloth, the material taken some three miles back in the woods. The batteries, of which there are some thirty in all, were complete, or very nearly so. They are all masked sand batte- gold lace parallelograms on the shoulderies, constructed with bastions, and thoroughly concealed, both from being located in a sian army. The arms of the men seem tol-torrest in a majority of instances, and by erably well kept and in good order. Many torrest in a majority of instances, and by earth coverings. They range all around the curve, beginning at a point above the navy yard, and extending down past Fort Baran-cus to McRea. There are is a masked batter-bly good. Now and then undersized, weakcas to McRea. There are is a masked batterry in the navy yard, and forty 4 to 6 inch guns, and four mortars not masked. Mr. Hussou could not give us the number of guns, but says there is a great number of them. The largest they have are 11 inch columbiads. A batterry of the heaviest mortars is located at points about midway between the navy yard and Fort Barancas, and the latter and Fort McRae, re- | which develops itself in the streets, in the bar these points, which are intended to meet the of the argument, which is mainly used by fire from the bastlons of Fort Picken in those | the Carolinians themselves that white men directions. The batteries above the navy yard, on the spur of land, have been erected since the Federal troops erected those at Santa Rosa Island, and are intended to oppose them. He says it is impossible for the inmates of Fort Pickens to know the locations of the masked betteries in the woods. The batteries located there are equal to the discharge of five hundred shots or shells an hour, and think, in saying this, he does not population here, are in all but name aristo-

In the navy yard he says, there is an observatory some two hundred feet high, from which the interior of Port Pickens can be dimly seen, and the operations upon Santa Rosa Island distinctly seen. He says the Confederates have seen the Federal troops re peatedly cutting down trees and erecting batteries on this island. They have also been seen Indistinctly, working by night. The fleet lay north of Santa Rosa Island, on the oceanward side.

Lord John Russell's Notice on Privateering.

(From the London Times of June 4th.) The following is a copy of the letter laid before the House of Commons by Lord John Russell last evening: "Foreign Office, June 1, 1861-My Lords -Her Majesty's Government are, as you are aware, desirous of observing the strictest neutrality in the contest which appears to be imminent between the United States and these styled Confederate States of America; and, with this view more effectually to carry out this principle they propose to interdict the armed ships, and also the privateers of both parties, from carrying prizes made by them into the ports, barbors, roadsteads, or waters of the United Kingdom, or of Her Majesty's colonies or possessions abroad.

"I have accordingly to sequaint your Lordships that the Queen I has been pleaseed to direct that orders in conformity with the principles above stated should forthwith be addressed to all proper authorities in the United Kingdom, and to Her Majesty's naval and other authorittes in all quarters beyond the United Kingdom for their guidance in the circumstances, I have, &c.,

The Wheat Crop.—The crop of wheat in all this region of country has been harvested; and no living man has ever seen a larger average yield than it has turned out. The wheat crop of West Tennessee is sufficient to bread double its population for a twelve month. Then the growing corn crop promises to be abundant. From the breadth of land planted, and the present promise of the crop, we think we do not err in saying that there will be more than twice as much corn raised his year, as was ever before raised in West Tennessee.—Japison Whig.

The white pop ulation which is not land and slaveholding and agricultural is very small and very in significant. The masters enjoy every advantage which can conduce to the physical excellence of the people and to the cultivation of the graces and accomplishments of life, even though they are disposed to neglect purely intellectual enjoyments and tastes. Many of those who served in the ranks are men worth from £5000 to £10,000 a year-at private teeds his company on pates and Madeira, another provides his comrades with unlimited Champagne, most grateful to the arid sandhills; a third, with a more soldierly view to their permanent rather than occasional efficiency, purchases for the men of his "Guard" a complete equipment of Enfield rifles. NAVAL ENGAGEMENT-GALLANT AND DAR ING CHASE OF A FEDERAL STEAMER .- On Sunday evening, about 7 o'clock, while the Confederate steamer Empire was engaged in reconnoitering the enemy's works at Newport News, Captain Parrish discovered the Federal steamer Cataline, some distance off and under headway for Old Point. Chase was immediately given, and when within a few miles of Hampton Creek, the Empire fired two shots. one of which is believed to have taken effect on the Cataline-and but for the proximity of the Cumberland frigate, which promptly opened her battery to stop the chase, the Ca-taline would in all probability have fallen

Capt. Parrish and his officers deserve much praise for their daring conduct in this little affair, as do also several of the Richmond Greys who were on board the Empire as a marine guard. It is hoped that Capt. Parrish may soon be better prepared for offensive operations, by having a larger and more effective steamer placed under his control.— Norfolk Herald of June 19.
